COMMENTS FROM THE TOWN MANAGER'S OFFICE

The season for snow vehicles is approaching and with it comes the problems of registration as created by the legislature during the last session.

The Bureau of Taxation instructed all assessors to tax these machines as personal property. Then the Attorney General's Office interpreted the law regarding snow vehicles, as passed by the last legislature to mean these machines are motor vehicles subject to an excise tax under the same laws as automobiles. This will make them eligible to 1/2 rate Sept. 1, if purchased after April 1, otherwise they would be taxed as personal property which will be used as a credit to the excise tax.

Proof will have to be shown at the Town Office that the vehicle was purchased after April 1, if the owner desires an excise tax at the one-half rate.

STATE'S SNOW VEHICLE LAW PROVIDES FOR NON-RESIDENT PERMITS

Maine's new regulations for the operation of snow traveling vehicles have been liberalized to allow the issuance of temporary permits to non-resident owners of snowmobiles who wish to use them in this State.

The new ruling was announced this week by Secretary of State Joseph T. Edgar, following a public hearing in Augusta, Sept. 17.

The regulation now allows non-resident owners to secure a temporary permit from licensed dealers. Each permit, costing $2 is valid for 15 consecutive days following date of issue.

Maine residents will still be required to pay the full $4 registration fee and also pay a State excise tax or personal property tax to operate snow vehicles, except on land which they own and on which they are domiciled.

The public hearing was called after it had been determined that the new regulations, which went into effect July 1, had made no provisions for non-residents who bring their machines into Maine for recreation or to compete in increasingly popular snowmobile races.

UNDERSTANDING OF WISE APPLICATION IMPORTANT

"Perfection of tools and confusion of aims are characteristic of our time."—Albert Einstein.

Again and again it is being contended that men are becoming dissociated as citizens in the very process of coming together in imposing economic organizations. And that the problem is to coordinate on the basis of more essential human values than the will to profit.

The inference here would appear to be that the essential human values are unprofitable. Are they? History and factual data tell a different story.

The standardization of the factory slum was the chief urban achievement of the nineteenth century. Yet the garden city concept emerged out of that slum, out of purely commercial considerations. The utilitarians realized that that devitalizing environment lowered human working efficiency!

There is already evidence that we recognize the urgent task confronting us—the shift of emphasis from "bigger" to "better". From the quantitative to the qualitative. That our brain and our heart, not the machine, must decide our destiny. And that "it is not the tool, it is the mind that is at fault when things get out of hand" (W.R.B. Wilcox).

The plans above are of a tile factory in a small town in southern California. The owner, a fine imaginative lawyer turned businessman, yielded to gentle persuasion to have his factory grounds landscaped. With just trees and lawn! He agreed to do it on part of the site—about a third of it. He also agreed to experiment with an unusual innovation: to have his parking areas under grass instead of under asphalt. The design of the car park was unusual too: it was not to be a huge square but the cars were to be parked along the alleys, under the trees. The alleys were designed of sufficient width to permit a line of cars parked alongside each line of trees, and to allow sufficient space for traffic in both directions.

The master plan provided for a considerably increased volume of traffic. Arrangements would then be made to have cars move along one alley in one direction, and along the other in the opposite direction.

The trees selected for the purpose were sturdy, pest free white alder, at approximately $4.—a piece.

The effects of the inexpensive landscaping of just one part of the property were quite amazing. The workers soon built benches and became sociable consuming their lunches out-of-doors.

Apart from the delight to the eyes of all the employees at the sight of young trees and lawns

MT. ABRAM FISH & GAME ASSN. HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Mt. Abram Fish and Game Association was held Sept. 19 at Locke Mills. The following officers were re-elected: President, James Brown; Secretary, Randal Stevens; Treasurer, Clarence Howe. Also elected were Maynard Chase as vice president from West Paris; Richard Mills, vice president from Bryant Pond; Norwood Ford, vice president from Locke Mills; and Herman Bennett, vice president from West Bethel.

It was announced at the meeting that the dam at Indian Pond had been accepted by the Fish & Game Dept. and the fish had been killed off that day. Many pickerel and smelts were picked up at the pond and there were large suckers floating around.

The association gave a vote of thanks to all who helped on the dam; L. M. Mann & Son, David Ellingswood and Milton Mills, for the use of heavy equipment; P. H. Chadbourn and Co., for the dirt for the earth fill and all who donated time, gasoline, lumber, etc., to make it possible to build the dam in one week end. Also to the Martin family for use of their road and land and coffee as well as their help. It is hoped to see some good fishing there in the years to come. It is planned to build another spillway at Twitchell dam Oct. 6. Any help will be appreciated.

COUPLES CLUB OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH TO MEET OCT. 2

Wednesday, Oct. 2, the Congregational Couples Club will open a new series of meetings with a pot luck supper in the church dining room at 6:30. There are many in town who have never been to Couples Club—any are welcome and urged to be present who are interested in fellowship, and thinking where today's church is going—if anywhere. Any who are not contacted are asked to bring casserole, salad, dessert or call Jan Stowell 824-2876, or Joan Chadbourn 824-2222.

Charles Schleich, pastor of the Lovell United Church of Christ, is the dynamic, young minister, who will present the program. He has ideas for those who feel frustrated with today's church and image of God and Christianity and need direction as well as for those who have firm beliefs. Come participate, think if his ideas make sense to you.

Mrs. Grace Ethridge walked up as far as Isabel Smith's one afternoon last week on her way to visit the Roger Farnums. Miss Smith brought her up in her car. Grace was supper guest of the Farnums. Roger walked down with her in the early evening, then her grandson gave her a lift to her home. We thought she did well, a lady her age to walk so far, and only a year ago broke her leg.

The insurance adjuster of your town, I don't recall his name, but there again, nothing was too little or too much for him to do for us. And lastly, the nice cab driver who drove us the long way to Portland.

In closing, an accident is a thing of horror. My husband had never had one. I am so grateful to my God that the injuries were small. But I shall always remember the kind people of Bethel who helped strangers in need. Thank you, dear friends.

TRAVELER EXPRESSES GRATITUDE FOR AREA'S COURTESY

The following letter appeared in "The Lewiston Daily Sun" on Saturday, Sept. 22, 1968. (The Matthews family were involved in an automobile accident on the Route 2 overpass on Sept. 6.)

Thanks to Bethel
To the Editor:
It isn't often that one takes a pen and thanks an entire town for its kindness. That is what I want to do. I want to thank the town of Bethel.

I was in a two-way collision in Bethel and I will always remember this town with the deepest gratitude.

First, I would thank the State Trooper who transported me to the doctor's office, then waited and took me to the local innkeeper (he had searched all over for a place taking lodgers). I don't know his name, but Maine must be proud of her Troopers. I thank them.

Dr. John Young is a doctor whom any town in the U. S. A. would be proud to have. As soon as I entered his office, and amidst his many medical degrees, I saw a diploma honoring his post graduate work at Johns Hopkins University. Believe me, I felt better. The "Hopkins" enrolls only the best. And that your Dr. Young is. You simply can never understand the comfort of mind involved in knowing you have such a capable doctor. Thank you, Dr. Young. I'm coming along just fine!

Having admired your beautiful scenery, enroute, a beauty I have enjoyed in past years, I must now talk about your genial innkeeper, Mr. Greig. How kind and thoughtful he was. Ice packs, soups, comfort. A hospital couldn't measure up to his kind care and hospitality.

The insurance adjuster of your town, I don't recall his name, but there again, nothing was too little or too much for him to do for us. And lastly, the nice cab driver who drove us the long way to Portland.

In closing, an accident is a thing of horror. My husband had never had one. I am so grateful to my God that the injuries were small. But I shall always remember the kind people of Bethel who helped strangers in need. Thank you, dear friends.

GREENWOOD CITY

— Mrs. Colista Morgan, Correspondent —

It was a clear, bright morning; crisp and beautiful, with the promise of warmth as the sun climbed. So my sister, Annie, here from Fishers Island, N. Y., and I tingled to be away on a hike.

How can one stay inside at this time of the year when its much better on a day, mellow with the richness of autumn, along a country road, across an open field, on the edge of the woodland? We chose to explore the old Young Hill and visit the place of our mother's birth.

Leaving the car at the end of the black road, a short distance at this end, we paused to look down into the far reaching valley. A ribbon, the river wound on its way.

Now we proceeded on a foot path at first with no house in sight nearer than the white specks in the valley. Across "Ribbon" was the jagged cliff, gray-white in the sunshine; the same cliff, under which we played as children and we wondered if we could now follow the foot path which led into the cool depth of the forest and on up to our Aunt Ella's on Curtis Hill.

Now climbing up the old road, everywhere there were stone walls. How many hours were spent in building them! First they must have selected a stone carefully from a pile, eased it in with just the right pressure and at just the right angle making it broad at the base slowly tapering to the top, smooth and neat on the front side, rough and rugged at the back and then when it was done, no frost or storm could undermine it.

The old cellars have stood there many, many years too. The red of fall was already in the maples.

Some of the fall asters had lost their usual gaiety and looked a little sad and lonely; others pert and smiling.

At one old cellar the Bouncing Bet was blooming but rather forlorn.

But the ferns there, along the walls, and up the hillsides showed fronds lively and as green as early summer.

Now and then we left the old road to explore; going through a tangle of tall weeds mostly stems of the goldenrod somewhat shriveled while the milkweed poured out its silken contents to be spread by the wind.

At one spot stood a solitary "broken hearted" shack. Its only piece of furniture a couch which had somehow withstood the winds, rains, and snows. Beyond stood a few towering beeches looking like old gray elephants, lost in the silence of the grove.

In a lonely spot, among a group of trees, there was a pool where the waters from somewhere had stopped to rest. Moose and deer were enjoying its presence.

A few gentians, by chance, we came upon.

"—blossoms bright with autumn dew," whose "—sweet and quiet eye

Look through its fringes to the sky,

Blue—blue—as if that sky let fall,

A flower from its cerulean wall."

(Unknown)

Down over the far side of the hill we now went, where ledges were under foot, at times soft with moss. At the base of this side of the hill, just one hour and forty-five minutes, we found the cellar for which we were searching; here in another valley.

In the yard stood an old elm, no leaves left; even here among the lonely hills the "bug" had struck.

No doubt our mother had played under this very elm. Beyond, was one small building, possibly a tool shed, with a vine of deep scarlet following its walls.

Resting on the old door step, looking, listening, there was a certain contentment, that I can't explain and that some never find. About us squirrels were harvesting nuts, over the miles of woodland, eating and hiding them.

The jays, looking gray against the sky, began to scream over the flower gardens, now only weed patches.

Crows cawed in the distance.

The sky was blue, the day was balmy, and we were happy facing a "screen" of sumac, now brilliant red; lovely against a green vine in a dead maple. Even the breeze moved up the valley for just a little then back again. A few big white clouds drifting across the sky brought the exclamation, "Look at those clouds!" Their shadows were graceful across the trees, hills, tops, and mountains. They set us to wishing! We were envious of them!

Old apple trees, their fruit carrying a delicate blush, still bent their heads with offerings to the deer, squirrels, and others.

The crickets played their never ending concert, the bumble bees hummed, and we traveled from this door step in mind and in imagination, reviewing what we knew comparing notes over the years; many since we last came this way, and wondered about many things.

When we turned back to climb the hill, this time in a reverse direction, we spoke of the old cemetery and how we must watch more carefully as we had missed it on the way up.

Familiar land marks greeted us this time and we did find the resting place of the Young families for whom the Hill got its name. It was cleared but otherwise neglected, stones down, flags old and weathered, the only remembrance to soldiers who long ago served their country's flag.

Part way back and far up on Shaw's Ledge, the tower blinked above us, the only man made modern thing in existence here where the valley broadened with hillslopes out in the open.

We ate our lunch on the wall of an old cellar, on which there was moss worthy of attention and vines with alluring tendrils, rose bushes at one side held a story for interest and other bushes had secrets worth telling.

In the distance flung out across the horizon the grays and blues of the mountains had become purple now and they seemed to climb one up another's shoulders until the topmost, thrust its head into the upside dome of the sky itself, and the pines so tall seemed to hold it up.

This was enough to make us want to just sit and look and feel. But we faced reality soon. We came to our car nestled among the tall grasses looking so small against nature's vast background of shadowy greens tied with "Ribbon" flowing on through this enchanted fairyland of loveliness.

CHRETIEN - MELVILLE

The Locke Mills Union Church was the setting Saturday, Aug. 17, of the wedding of Carolyn Emma Melville and Randall Clyde Chretien. The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Beatrice Burris of West Bethel. Traditional wedding music was played by Mrs. Beverly Melville, sister-in-law of the bride. The bride was given in marriage by her father. The best man was Michael Chretien, brother of the groom.

The bride's gown was a floor length "bouffant" style of tulle and Chantilly lace. The gown had a tight bodice and bateau neckline. The appliques were trimmed with iridescent sequins. The gown also had long pointed sleeves. The skirt had tiers of Chantilly lace, tapering down into a chapel length style. The fingertip length veil of imported illusion had a small tiara trimmed with beads and sequins to match the gown. The bride carried a bouquet of white split carnations, pink roses and a spray of lilies of the valley.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Mavis Brooks, of Hanover, wore a floor length pink lace gown with a pink chiffon overlay and a matching veil. She carried a colonial bouquet of blue and pink split carnations. The bridesmaids, Mrs. Donna Melville of West Paris, Miss Joyce Farwell of Locke Mills and Miss Eileen Saunders of Bethel, were dressed in identical floor length blue lace gowns with a blue chiffon overlay and matching veils. They carried colonial bouquets of yellow and white split carnations. Tiny Diane Melville of Temple, niece of the bride, was flower girl and was dressed in a floor length, white lace gown with matching veil. Gregory Chretien, cousin of the groom, was ring bearer.

Ushers were Matthew Brooks of Upton and Norton Brooks of Hanover, cousins of the groom, and Owen Melville of West Paris, brother of the bride. After the ceremony a reception was held at the Locke Mills Legion Hall with the American Legion Auxiliary catering. Friends of the couple, Richard Paine, George Nickerson, Brian Buck, and David Thurston served the refreshments. The wedding cake was made by Lynwood Wheeler, uncle of the groom, and served by Mrs. Ann Proctor of West Paris. Mrs. Judy Brooks of Upton circulated the guest book. In charge of the gift table were Mrs. Alice Melville of Temple, Mrs. Sally Melville of Locke Mills, Mrs. Beverly Melville of Locke Mills, all sisters-in-law of the bride, and Mrs. Sabra Buswell of Buckfield, friend of the bride.

The bride's mother was dressed in a beige ensemble with matching accessories and a corsage of pink and white carnations. The groom's mother wore a light blue ensemble with bone accessories and a corsage of pink and white carnations.

For her going away outfit the bride wore a beige tight-fitting, sleeveless dress with matching coat and had a corsage of yellow and white carnations.

After a short wedding trip to Canada the couple are residing in Bethel until fall when they will move to Orono where Mr. Chretien will complete his senior year at the University of Maine.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Melville of Locke Mills, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Chretien of Bethel.

The honored couple wishes to thank all those sending cards and good wishes, all were greatly appreciated.

The following poem, composed by Edie Robertson, was read by Martha Von Zintl at the evening gathering:

To "Gary" & "Dottie"
Many, many years ago
A young lad came to town
Who barely reached the table-top
Where he lived with Grammie Brown.

While miles away in Northern Maine

A lovely girl was growing
The daughter of the warden there
Who was making quite a showing
She moved to town and soon they met

This young and handsome pair
Who loved and laughed and settled down
The rest of life to share.

The years brought joy—first Sharon Ann

(A lovely lady now—
An Army nurse for Uncle Sam—
She deserves to take a bow)
Then after Sharon—David came
How nice for "Tuck" and Dot
(A baby brother for Sharon Ann
They had dreamed about a lot).

Then fortune smiled on them once more

As all of us have seen
When another lively miss was born

And they named her Barbara Jean.

Now "Barbie Jean" is 10 years old
And would like to own a horse—
No-one has the slightest doubt
She will some day, of course!

The lean years and the full ones
They have met them all with pluck
And enjoyed a laugh along the way

Good sports our Dot and "Tuck".
May they have many golden years
Of joy and health and love
And may God Bless this "silver" one

With rich gifts from above.
